

20th Annual Show By "Ten American Painters" Is On

By W. G. Bowdoin.

The twentieth annual exhibition by "Ten American Painters" is now to be seen at the Montross Gallery, No. 559 Fifth Avenue, until March 24. Edward Simmons has done a pretty bit in his "Morning" in which he shows a female nude, in three-quarter length, in exhibition of the popular song, "It's a long time to get up in the morning." The model "stretches" herself most becomingly. The interior is joyously painted in most excellent expression.

Robert Reid has contributed an interesting self-portrait, done in his well-known "portrait impression" style. The technique is good and the whole thing has been handled with entire mastery of the used medium.

"The Screen," by the same artist, is highly decorative. It features a reclining nude, who drapes very becomingly about herself, a primrose robe. In her right hand she holds a fan, which she is about to use. A decorative work enters harmoniously into the composition.

Frank W. Benson's "Morning Flight," is a charming treatment of a covey of ducks in flight. The wing beats are happily painted.

Mr. Benson's "Morning Flight," is very similar in treatment with his etching of the same subject, now in the American Institute of Graphic Arts exhibition at the National Art Club.

"The Feeding Ground," by the same artist, is also very joyous in its symbolism. The flock of swimming and feeding ducks is registered very sympathetically.

"The Budding Oak," by Willard L. Metcalf, is a vivid and very charming landscape treatment that exploits the oak in bud.

"Springtime Festival" is rendered attractive by the same artist through the agency of his high keyed treatment of the blossoming tree, of the springtime, in the foreground. The land and water as presented in the picture are in excellent contrast.

"The Still Life—Fish," by the late William M. Chase, is a delightful treatment of fish, in connection with a large bowl and a splint basket.

"Kitty Hunter," by Childe Hassam, is a pleasing interior, in which the table introduced groans beneath the weight of the big red apples in the container upon it. The girl in the picture is painted after the Hassam method. The mirror reflection is good.

"Portrait," by J. Alden Weir, is a well digested conception of a girl in half length, while "White Oaks" is an excellent study of a bit of forestry.

Hayley Lever, modernist, has sixteen of his canvases on exhibition at the Daniel Gallery, No. 2 West Forty-seventh Street, until March 27. They are all executed in accordance with modern tenets.

Mr. Lever again demonstrates that he is a colorist. He paints with his soul on fire. That is to say, his work gives evidence of being done with enthusiasm and with a love for his art.

In his "The Orchard" he has managed with no little skill to register the effect of sunlight upon the side of the little red house in the picture. His blooming trees are also indicative of design that he has carefully conceived and carried out with due regard for light and shade and color values.

There is, however, a lack of detail perfection as to his used forms, his ranging hues, and even of certain of his colors, that make the total ensemble and becomes defective.

"THE ETERNAL SIN" PROVES A BIG TRIUMPH FOR FLORENCE REED

Broadway offered its approval last night to another of Herbert Brenson's screen masterpieces, "The Eternal Sin." As with "The Bride," the other big success of this director, large audiences saw "The Eternal Sin" at the Broadway Theatre last night.

Florence Reed, who won her laurels on the speaking stage, has the title role, Lucretia Borgia. Her beauty and dramatic ability give her an enviable position in the film world.

Red-blooded romance, with melodramatic thrills in abundance, make the picture worth while. Brenson has taken advantage of his skill in massing detail and bringing out in that is potent in an able actress's ability.

Want $625,000 on Contract Concerning Moving Pictures.

John J. McKeon yesterday sued in the Supreme Court for $525,000. He claims under a contract made with Charles Frohman, Inc., and Al Hayman, whereby the plaintiff was to receive one-half the net proceeds of certain motion pictures in which he was to cooperate with the defendants.

He says these proceeds included capital stock of the New Empire All-Star Film Corporation worth $1,250,000. His allegations are denied.

GREENHUT'S "THE BIG STORE"

SIXTH AVE. 18th TO 19th STREET

Great Specials for Wednesday and Thursday.

March Sales of China and Cut Glass

Even when we ourselves survey the magnificent assemblages of China and Glass Wares included in our March Sales, we stand amazed.

For consider how the present conditions in foreign countries have affected goods of this character. Twenty years of experience have convinced us that it is to Greenhut's that people come for bargains such as they will find in these sales—and, adverse conditions to the contrary notwithstanding, THEY WILL NOT BE DISAPPOINTED. Let these extra good offerings prove it.
